Charges Six Anti-Semitic Groups Link Bigots In 16 Countries

Last Christmas Eve's smearing of a Cologne Synagogue set off a global wave of anti-Semitic incidents in 41 countries. The number of incidents is estimated at somewhere between 2000 and 2500. The initial act by members of a German neo-Nazi group sparked teen-age and adult hoodlums, drunks, individual anti-Semites, as well as organized anti-Jewish groupings, some of them with international links, to go on a spree of synagogue bombing and arson, vandalism of churches, cemeteries, and synagogues, as well as personal and group insults, daubing buildings with anti-Semitic and neo-Nazi slogans in at least 430 different places throughout the world.

A fact sheet on the epidemic has been submitted to the United Nations by the World Jewish Congress in New York, according to Samuel Bronfman, of Montreal, Canada, chairman of the WJC's North American Executive Committee. The submission was made public together with a report on the background, motivations, and consequences of the world-wide incidents. Mr. Bronfman noted that the material had been prepared following a resolution by the United Nations Commission on Human Rights. The World Jewish Congress urged United Nations action to curb anti-Semitism and suggested the mobilization of Interpol to investigate the incidents and their background, as well as to hunt down neo-Fascist groups with international connections.

Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, director of the WJC's Institute of Jewish Affairs, who headed the organization's study of anti-Semitism, documented as examples of international anti-Semitic groups six organizations abroad with a seventh, the Ku Klux Klan, in the U.S.A. "entering the international field by establishing contacts in West Germany, Great Britain, Austria, and Argentina." These are mostly groups of recent vintage.

Dr. Robinson's report cited the Unites States as the country with the largest known number of places where anti-Semitic manifestations took place following the Cologne synagogue desecration last December. He named 126 places in the United States where such incidents occurred; 82 in West Germany; 37 in Great Britain; 32 in Italy; 25 in Austria; 17 in France; 13 in Sweden; 10 in Switzerland; and about 100 places in other countries. The number of localities does not necessarily correspond with the total of incidents, he notes. In West Berlin alone investigations were conducted in 344 instances.

Dr. Robinson charged that the six international anti-Semitic groups together link bigots in 16 countries: Austria, Australia, Belgium, Britain, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Norway, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, and the United States. The six groups are:

Apparel Man Gave Most Of Life To Industry Progress

Bertram Reinitz, former newspaper man and for the last four years executive director of the Industrial Council of Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers, Inc., died in New York, in his home at 11 Riverside Drive. He was 62 years old. Mr. Reinitz entered the newspaper field shortly after his graduation from high school, joining The Brooklyn Times. From there he went to the editorial staff of the former New York American and then to The Herald Tribune.

From 1925 to 1929, he was a regular contributor to The New York Times, writing Sunday columns dealing with personalities and day-to-day changes in the life of the city. His first close association with the garment trade, to which he later devoted most of his life, began in 1921 when he became editor of The Daily Garment News. The next year he went to The Garment Trade Review and eventually became its publisher.

Mr. Reinitz was credited by the industry for its introduction to the field of public relations when he became public relations director of the Trade association in 1926, says the New York Times. After the National Recovery Act was declared unconstitutional, Mr. Reinitz helped in the formation of the National Coat and Suit Industry Recovery Board, a nation-wide association of manufacturers affiliated with the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

His work spread to other sections of the apparel industry. He successively helped in forming the Fashion Originators Guild of America, the Affiliated Dress Manufacturers, the Dress Creators League of America and the Creators of American Fashions.

During his lifetime, Mr. Reinitz was acclaimed in the industry as being one of the most progressive influences in shaping policies and actions used today. He also helped to form the Apparel Industries Inter-Association Committee, which worked closely with the National Retail Merchants Association on the creation of fair trade standards.

He was a member of the Lambs. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Dinny Reinitz; a daughter, Mrs. Judith Lazarus of Washington; a son, Dr. Neale Reinitz, a Professor of Literature at Colorado College; a brother, Irving Reinitz, of New York; and a grandson.

Payment Of Claims Against Germany Is Too Slow

Gratification over the German decision to recognize the eligibility of victims of persecution in Rumanian provinces under Nazi influence during the war, who filed timely claims for indemnification, was expressed by the executive committee of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany, at its semi-annual meeting at the Royal Monceau Hotel, in Paris, France. Dr. Nahum Goldmann presided. At the same time, the Committee recorded its "deep concern over the laggard pace" at which adjudication of claims for individual indemnification were being processed. The Federal Indemnification Law, it was explained, expires on March 31, 1963, and to date less than one half of the claims filed have been settled. Of 2,674,328 such claims filed, only 998,403 were processed by the beginning of this year.

A call to the German states through whom the federal law is being administered to accelerate the rate of settlement and payment was issued by the executive committee. "At the present pace, the full program cannot be completed by the closing date", the committee stated. "Some few of the states are keeping to schedule and will cover their complete lists before the deadline; the others must do likewise. The situation calls for the acceleration and simplification of the processes of adjudication and settlements, and for the taking on of additional personnel to insure that tens of thousands are not cut off from the indemnification due them and which they so sorely need".

One of the major bottlenecks holding up settlement is the processing of claims made for permanent physical and mental injuries suffered under Nazi persecution, the meeting was told. Many of the German states are demanding forms of detailed documentation which are practically impossible to provide and that are "definitely contrary to the spirit of the federal law which demands only that reasonable proof be given", Dr. Goldmann said. As a result of the Claims Conference representations, it is expected that arrangements will be made for German medical experts to be available in important overseas centers of refugee settlement.

Killer Chose German Lawyer, No Nazi, To Defend Him

Adolf Eichmann chose Dr. Robert Servatius of Cologne, West Germany, to defend him at his forthcoming trial, a spokesman of the Israeli Ministry of Justice announced. The 65-year-old German lawyer participated in the Nuremberg war crimes trials as a defense counsel, says the New York Times. He was not a Nazi.

Eichmann, who headed the Gestapo's Jewish section and who will be tried in Israel for his part in the murder of millions of European Jews during World War II, chose Dr. Servatius from three names submitted to him, according to the Ministry of Justice.

Dr. Servatius had been authorized to take over the defense of Eichmann by the latter's brother, Dr. Robert Eichmann, of Linz, Austria. The lawyer then wrote to the Ministry of Justice, which gave his name to the prisoner along with the names of a Chilean national who is living in West Germany, and a New York lawyer. Both had offered their services.

The Ministry spokesman also said Eichmann had been informed that new legislation would be submitted to the Knesset (Parliament) to enable foreign counsel to represent him in an Israeli court. Under existing legislation a foreigner may appear in an Israeli court only as a "friend" of the defendant, says the New York Times. The court has the final say who may appear in this way, and a defense counsel appearing as a "friend" may not ask payment for his services.

After reading the letters from each of the three possible lawyers, Eichmann said he preferred Dr. Servatius because the latter had been asked to take the case by Eichmann's brother and the lawyer was experienced in defending Nazis accused of war crimes.

Bernstein To Con[illegible] Y. Philharmonic In Berlin, With Ford's $150,000

The New York Philharmonic will give two concerts at the West Berlin Cultural Festival on September 22 and 23 under the sponsorship of the Ford Motor Co. Fund. All expenses in transporting the 106 musicians will be paid by Ford. The bill is estimated at $150,000.

Leonard Bernstein will conduct the concerts in the hall of Berlin's broadcasting station SFB. David M. Keiser, president of the Philharmonic, told the New York Herald Tribune that officials of the Ford Fund had asked that the proceeds of the concerts go to a charity chosen by Willy Brandt, Mayor of West Berlin, and Dr. Gerhart von Westerman, director of the festival.

Henry Ford II, president of the Ford Motor Co., said in a statement that he regards financing the Philharmonic's Berlin appearances as an opportunity to "aid the courageous people of West Berlin in their ideological battle with Communist East Germany."

The Philharmonic, which begins a tour of the United States and Canada on August 10, will play in Charlotte, N.C., on September 18; arrive in New York the next day and leave for Germany on September 20. It will return to the U.S. for the last concert of the tour in Washington on September 25 and open its regular New York season on September 29. To give time for the trip to Berlin, concerts scheduled for Columbia, S.C.; Raleigh, N.C.; Richmond, Va.; and Baltimore have been postponed to next spring.

The visit to Berlin, which is probably the most expensive orchestral expedition financed by a single business firm, will be the Philharmonic's fourth. It played there in 1930 under Arturo Toscanini; in 1955 under Dimitri Mitropoulos; and in 1959 under Mr. Bernstein.

Mr. Ford called the annual fall festival in West Berlin a potent weapon in the cultural struggle between West and East Germany, says the New York Herald Tribune. The West Berlin Festival, he noted, has become so attractive to East Berliners that the East Berlin government has formed a festival of its own featuring prominent performers from Communist nations.

Abbott Washburn, acting director of the United States Information Agency, hailed the Philharmonic's West Berlin appearances as a "superb indication of the support and encouragement of the American people and their Western Allies."

Three Boys And A Vow To Remember

BY RUTH CALB, OF JERUSALEM

All over the world little boys of a certain age read books about honor and friendship. And all over the world little boys strive to emulate their literary heroes; they strike blood bonds, and swear eternal friendship and mutual aid until, in due course, a fist fight puts an end to the bond.

In Wroclaw (formerly Breslau) in western Poland, three little boys read such a book. On a rainy day in the fall of 1956, they met in their schoolyard and, when nobody was looking, cut their thumbs with a dirty razor blade, and swore a life friendship over a bottle of soda pop. Solemnly, Gershon, Moshe, and Theodor promised "Never shall we quarrel and fight each other; nothing shall ever part us. And if the family of one moves to Israel, the others shall try and persuade their families to emigrate to Israel also."

Their bond was a serious matter. Indeed, it was a mutual defense alliance against the hostile world around them. The children in school would think twice before calling any one of them "dirty Jew" if they knew three would hit back in unison. Since that rainy day in Wroclaw, much water has flowed under the bridges of the Oder. But the bond sealed in blood held fast. Even though they no longer live in Wroclaw, the three boys remain together. And they have never fought each other.

Fair-haired, snub-nosed Moshe (13), pale-faced, dark-eyed Gershon (14), and sturdy, freckle-faced Theodor (13) are all in Israel now. And as soon as they arrived they schemed so skilfully that not only do they now attend the same school, as they did in Poland, but they actually live together — in Youth Aliya's Israel Goldstein Youth Village in Jerusalem. They are in the same youth group and class and only after much coaxing did they agree to separate for a few hours as each of them works in a different branch in the institution.

How were they reunited? In halting Hebrew, aided by sign language, grimaces, and a few words of Polish when everything else fails, the "Three Musketeers," as they are called in the children's village, relate the following story:

All three were born somewhere in Russia and their families were repatriated to Poland about four years ago and settled in Wroclaw. All three fathers found work quickly, Moshe's father as a glove cutter, Gershon's as a tailor, and Theodor's as a dentist. The boys went to school together, spent after-school hours and week-ends in each other's homes. The families were conscious Jews who lit candles on the Sabbath and observed Jewish festivals. They even understood a bit of Yiddish. They were proud of their origin. "We hit back when the anti-Semites attacked us," declares Moshe with pride.

After much planning they solemnised their blood pact. Theodor became the undisputed leader, but the majority decided all issues. "If Gershon and I don't agree with Theodor's views, he must bow to the majority," explains Moshe, the fastest and liveliest of the trio. "It works . . . we never quarrel."

Soon after the school yard rites took place, Gomulka returned to head Poland's Communist Party, and with his reappearance, jamming of foreign broadcasts stopped. "We picked up the Polish news of Kol Israel (the Israel radio) and followed the Sinai campaign," said Theodor. The boys soon decided to save their weekly allowances and with these pennies to travel to Israel. Though the parents wondered why the boys suddenly stopped going to the movies, nobody suspected anything.

One day, the three lads were gone. They had simply vanished, without leaving a trace; missing in the various homes were knapsacks, clothes, a compass, field glasses, an atlas. Two days later the boys were picked up by the police near the Czech border, their hopes dashed. Only Moshe was cheerful: his family had already applied for exit permits to Israel. "I knew I'd get there anyway, but I went along with my friends because of our bond."

However, this escapade helped the other parents to make up their minds. Led by their sons, they decided to apply for emigration to Israel. Moshe and his family were the first to arrive in Haifa. Triumphantly, he announces, "We arrived in April, Gershon in June, and Theodor three months later." All came in Jewish Agency transports, penniless but with an assortment of movable property — the dentist had even brought all his equipment along. David's family was given a hut in Tiberias, Gershon's a hut in Kfar Ata, northeast of Haifa, and Theodor and his folks were put up by friends in Tel Aviv. The families were out of touch, and things looked pretty bleak for the boys.

However, fate willed it that Gershon should have an uncle in Ramat Gan, and Moshe an aunt in nearby Ramatayim, both towns close to Tel Aviv. These two thus met and proceeded to find the third musketeer. They questioned Jewish Agency officials, inquired in schools, and one day they hunted down Theodor in Tel Aviv.

At that time, Theodor was due to begin his new life at the Israel Goldstein Youth Village in Jerusalem. "He came, and for two weeks he mentioned occasionally that he had two friends," relates Lonya, the housemother. "Then, one day, he pounced on us, explaining that he was united to his friends by a blood bond and that they must join the center too." That was difficult because there was hardly any room. But room was found, and the trio was united. However, that was not all. Gershon was delivered by his brother who said there was also Leah, a sister, to be taken care of. Leah, aged 11, joined the children's section of the youth village. And then there was Roma, Theodor's 15-year-old sister. He couldn't live without Roma near him . . . "Well," grins Lonya, "Roma is with us too."

"It isn't always easy handling that solid front of three boys with a lot of willpower," sighs the young instructor who takes care of them. "So long as they have not found their feet they stick together, and we had quite a time persuading at least one of them to sleep in another dormitory." The boys are still at sea, confused by language difficulties and the vastly different way of life with different sets of values. Youth Aliya spares no effort and time to help these children settle down, with special lessons and counselling, but it is difficult to absorb them entirely so long as full cooperation from the parents is lacking.

On the whole, the three well-behaved boys like their new life. But they "hate" Hebrew study, particularly Bible. And they don't like manual labor. In Jerusalem, Moshe and Gershon work half a day in the flower and vegetable garden, respectively, while Theodor got a coveted place in the ceramics workshop. That is not work — it is "art." But Theodor knows that one day soon he may be shifted to something lowly like yard cleaning, and he dreads that day.

Rarely does reality come up to expectations, particularly when the expectations are based on romantic notions, as was the case with the "blood brothers." The anti-climax was bound to come, all the more since their parents, like so many other Polish newcomers, found it hard to settle down in jobs and the daily routine and had neither the time nor the ability to help their children. On the contrary, they soon created additional problems by discussing the idea of moving on — to Australia, maybe, or Canada, where glove cutters and tailors were more in demand than in Israel and where dentists could get a clientele in the city. Theodor's father balked at the idea of moving out into a development area where he could get a good practice.

As Lonya says, "The children felt that instability and their confusion grew. So long as they considered themselves in transit only, they couldn't integrate and get that feeling of belonging and pride in the youth center and the country which is so essential for immigrant children."

They showed polite but remote interest when the future was discussed. All want to study. Kibbutz? A life of agriculture and pioneering toward which Youth Aliya trains its wards? "We like the youth village, but then we want to go on to the Institute of Technology," they insist. "We'll serve in the Army; everybody serves. But we want to serve together and then study architecture and engineering."

The boys knew that there would hardly be a chance for them to remain together in another country — Canada and Australia are so huge. And they began working on their parents to stay in Israel, persuading them that other occupations than tailoring and glove cutting were honorable too, and helped bring this about by continual representations backed up by documentation and by the filing of test cases by the United Restitution Office, the legal aid arm of the Claims Conference", Dr. Goldmann said. "We thus won acceptance of our contention that the Federal Indemnification Law provides for compensation not only for residents of countries officially occupied by Nazis but also in the satellite countries that were under the influence of the Third Reich. With the recognition of this principle by the German states it is our hope that the thousands of claims which remained dormant until this issue was resolved will now be speedily settled".

The executive committee also registered its deep concern for those who through no fault of their own were unable to file claims before October 1, 1953, the legal period allowed by the law. "The many thousands who were able to come out into the free world only after that date suffered lasting injuries under the Nazis and we feel that there is a moral responsibility to meet their claims equally with those who were fortunate enough and free enough to file their claims within the legal period", the committee stated.

SIX ANTI-SEMITIC GROUPS

ciated with groups in Germany, Italy, Austria, and Belgium.

2. Swede Per Engdahl's European Social Movement, reported to consist of 50 associated organizations in 14 countries. Dr. Robinson notes "the Movement probably has also connections with Arab countries; there is a Scandinavian Arab Friendship Union, headed by John Alling, of Copenhagen."

3. The Nordisk Association with headquarters in Sweden.

4. The Northern League, headed by Roger Pearson, of London, who has contacts with anti-Semitic groups in the U.S.A. as well as throughout Europe.

5. The "action associations" of former SS men mainly in Europe who are also connected with groups of Latvian, Esthonian, Ukrainian, Albanian, and Spanish exiles.

6. Legion Europa, established in October, 1959, in Vienna, with support in Germany, Italy, Spain, France, Belgium and Holland.

The World Jewish Congress noted that Einar Aberg, of Sweden, has been flooding many foreign countries with his hate material, as has Britain's Sir Oswald Mosley "on a somewhat more modest scale." Dr. Robinson states that it is not always possible "to obtain detailed information" on the activities of the various groups because "they publish no reports on their meetings." In a letter accompanying the World Jewish Congress' submission to UN Secretary-General Hammarskjold, Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig states that "the police authorities in a number of cities have uncovered some evidence of international links between subversive neo-Fascist groups."

Dr. Robinson notes that the recent wave of anti-Semitic incidents was new in extent but not in nature. The daubings of swastikas, desecration of cemeteries, anti-Semitic utterances, and anti-Jewish propaganda "were frequent long before; they had been going on for many years prior to 1959." But the December 24 Cologne synagogue attack created a "swastika epidemic" that led to 833 incidents officially recorded in West Germany alone. Estimating that there were at least 2000 to 2500 anti-Semitic manifestations throughout the world in the last few months, Dr. Robinson pointed out that "not all occurrences were reported, either at all or in detail.

There were various reasons for not reporting, including the desire that a dentist's life in a smaller town is just as rewarding, or even more so, than in Tel Aviv.

THREE BOYS AND A VOW TO REMEMBER

They won. The fathers are already working. The three boys and their sisters have stopped nagging Lonya for extra lessons in English, and instead are studying Hebrew and Bible. In addition, they are preparing for a delayed Bar Mitzvah and are looking forward to the triple celebration, which will take place in their Youth Aliya home, with all the relatives present. Instability and confusion are subsiding rapidly, as the feeling of belonging grows.

"It's all because of our bond," explains Moshe. Because of that bond, they led their families to Israel. And because of that bond, the families are remaining and making an effort to become integrated in the life of the nation.

We have just opened our one thousandth branch. It's in Regina, Saskatchewan and is located on Albert Street. And, like Royal Bank branches everywhere — in cities, towns and villages from Newfoundland to Vancouver Island and in many lands beyond Canada's borders — it will serve the needs of its own community.

Near you and your neighbours, too, is the door to a branch of the 'Royal'. Behind that door lies the experience, knowledge and strength of the whole institution. Keyed to the needs of your community, it offers the many varied and useful services of "the bank with a thousand front doors".

THE ROYAL BANK OF CANADA

The Zionist Organization Must Again Become A Mass Movement

BY DR. MORTON J. ROSSING, OF NASHUA, N.H., A NATIONAL Z.O.A. ADMINISTRATIVE VICE-PRESIDENT, NATIONAL CHAIRMAN OF THE AMERICAN ZIONIST FUND

The Zionist Organization of America must propose a platform that will lead the way in direction and purpose, at the forthcoming national convention. We have lost years analyzing ourselves instead of freeing ourselves from the attitude of defeat and hopelessness to which neither our incredible successes in the past, nor our numerous tasks for the future entitle us. Born out of the travail of oppression and homelessness, the Zionist ideal came to be nurtured by the fervor of the genius, Dr. Theodor Herzl, founder of modern political Zionism, and realized with the rebirth of Israel as a Jewish State 12 years ago.

Our Zionism is built on Jewish history, heritage, and tradition. Our concept of the oneness of the Jewish people and Jewish consciousness we consider basic in the totality of Zionism and Judaism. Do leaders of Jewish organizations and our non-Zionist friends accept this basic concept? I find that neither the Zionist concept of a Jewish community nor our approach to Jewish education have yet been accepted by the Jewish majority.

Our religion in America is not the same unifying force as it was during centuries of Jewish life in the Diaspora, even with the apparent return of American Jews to synagogues of various denominations. Within our own lifetime, we recall Jewish life in many countries of Eastern Europe concentrated within and around the synagogue. Ghetto-ized, our people had to be conscious of their Jewishness. Everything centered around the synagogue for the pious as well as for those who had supposedly severed all ties with God, and only on rare occasions went to the synagogue, perhaps on a Sabbath or Holiday.

I am convinced that if the Zionists were stronger, and we lived by our own attitudes toward life, we would provide the essential leadership needed. Every contact with any individual Zionist or group of Zionists which I have had during my travels through the country convinces me anew that we have dedicated Zionists, who indicate a tremendous strength, readiness to work, and willingness to sacrifice. To these loyal Zionists, alliance with the Zionist Organization of America and the World Zionist Organization gives them a feeling of close association with the State of Israel.

Since they were the prime fighters to establish a Jewish State (at a time when Zionism was not popular), today, veteran Zionists as well as the younger Zionists who have followed them have a clear-cut vision that the task of American Zionists is not fulfilled, and they must stand by the Jewish State as the first force in critical days as well as good days. Have we exhausted ourselves in the fight for physical survival via the State of Israel? Do we now presume to sun ourselves in freedom, and cover our spiritual survival by occasional synagogue attendance, by varied activities, mostly on fund-raising or charitable levels, or sending our children to a Sunday school, or even Hebrew school?

How do we acquire total Zionism? The issues are greater education and understanding of our glorious past and future program on the part of our Zionist members, our youth, and the Israeli people. Although philanthropy is an integral communal responsibility, yet this alone cannot uphold Judaism. It would appear, then, that Zionism is the only power which can revive and revitalize Jewishness and ensure its existence. This can be achieved only through a program of cultural and spiritual content.

The ZOA must look upon itself as an organization of experts, a professional association. I find that changes of officers in small ZOA Districts do not necessarily signify that these Zionists have background and knowledge. Naturally, some do; but many do not. They are prone to forget our prophets and sages of old, our inspired thinkers in Zionism, and the wisdom they imparted to us as a Jewish people. The present Z.O.A. member must become an expert on the following subjects:

Israel's internal life: economic, political, military; education and study of Hebrew through the "Ulpan" system; religion, the arts, foreign affairs; Israel's relation with its neighbors: the Arabs, Asia, Africa, and Europe; its relation with the world (including the United States) and vice-versa; its relation with the United States and vice-versa; its relation with American and world Jewry and vice-versa; the World Zionist Organization and Z.O.A.'s place in it; its place within the American Zionist family; its place within the American-Jewish community.

A national ZOA committee on each of the above subjects should be designated, headed by a vice-president, qualified because of his special interest to prepare and send out adequate information to regional and district members, and thus stimulate this activity. Every member should belong to at least one of these committees of his choice. Our goal should be to make our membership expert. Using our manpower wisely, each Zionist will eventually become the best informed person on his given subject, and will speak with authenticity and knowledge, and with the facts at his command. Armed with such a solid background, each ZOA expert will seek and find channels to bring his knowledge to the public closest to him: fellow Jews, Christian friends, clubs, radio, TV, newspaper, political representatives, and business associates. Suffice to say, an enormous chain reaction may well be initiated in every field of Zionist affairs, once the Zionist takes a real interest and uses his knowledge. This is not an easy task, but this will help to make the Z.O.A. a mass movement, and give it top priority in leadership and education.

The same program must be applied to our youth, as is done through Young Judaea clubs and Young Judaea camps. In my 20 years of association with Camp Young Judaea, the first Zionist youth camp in the country, I am pleased to report that the roots of this kind of knowledge are imbedded in our youngsters, and we are assured of their loyalty to Zionism and Israel as well as the American-Jewish community. Our camp program includes a leadership training course, in which senior campers participate. National Young Judaea has its special leadership training at Camp Tel Yehudah. Young Judaea's roots are deep, yet, it is a drop in the ocean.

Zionist youth camps are very few. The number of our young people who go to Israel to study is small, and Zionist student activity in our universities is negligible, but the need to counteract Arab propaganda is very great and very real. The fathers of many of our Judaeans are not even Z.O.A. members; the children go home to educate their parents, in some instances. Jewish education does not imply Jewish Day Schools only (although we should help to increase their number and importance) or attendance at Sunday or Hebrew Schools.

As to our relation with Israel (and this does not apply to fund-raising drives, be it Bonds, United Jewish Appeal, Jewish National Fund, ZOA, etc.) the Zionist Party structure has been much maligned, particularly by the "Johnnies come lately", who have no idea of the background and history which required this set-up in the first place, nor do they appreciate or understand the tremendous good accomplished by the parties, when only the zealots did practical immigration and settlement work, and built most of what later became the Jewish State, not to speak of the essential political work on the American scene!

Today, however, this structure is outmoded. The Zionist organizations outside Israel should not be forced to be tied to parties within Israel, in order to obtain seats at the World Zionist Congress, and on the Jewish Agency Executive. Why must there be a party key? Surely, with good will, a better system can be found. Whatever happens in Israel and with Israel has a direct effect upon each Jew everywhere, this the non-Zionists are not ready to face. Israel speaks out in regard to Jewish affairs, no matter where they occur. If Israel can speak up, why can't we?

It is a clear Zionist duty to be informed of what is occurring in Israel. Just as we are constantly engaged in propagandising Israel, so we should voice our criticism, when justified, and direct it to the right quarters, and in the right tone. Here is where Israel must give us the feeling that our opinions are welcome. We must educate the Israelis, and help to create a better atmosphere, by providing techniques to show the Israeli the role played by the Zionist movement in the creation of the Jewish State, and since then. The ZOA Daniel Frisch House can become a Center of Enlightenment in Israel, through a mobile library, speakers, films, etc., as well as sponsoring trips to Israel, so that American Zionists and Israelis can become better acquainted.

The average Israeli has, of necessity, been so absorbed with his day-by-day struggle that we must forgive him for not recognizing the selfless devotion of those who are not living in Israel, who are doing their share towards his well-being and his country's advancement. Forgiving him for past neglect does not mean that this deplorable lack of understanding and respect need continue until irreparable harm has been done, both for Israel's and world Jewry's future. If today's leadership in Israel does not consider the need for this relationship to be on the same level of priority as its dealings with foreign states, we must make the Israeli public aware of it. It is easy to tell us constantly that the Jews in the Diaspora need Israel (a statement which we Zionists accept, and most of our non-Zionist friends do not), and to forget that Israel is equally in need of the good will and support of American Zionists as well as world Jewry, in the free world. There is no coin with one side!

Our Zionist Organization has shown, time and again, its vitality and strength, a vision and mission to do the impossible. We must start, from the grass roots up, both in this country and in Israel, to hold our vanguard position towards a further glorious chapter in our Zionist history.

SIX ANTI-SEMITIC GROUPS

not to involve the police, not to give too much publicity to the incidents, and so on." In some instances it was proved that the perpetrators were connected with anti-Semitic or neo-Nazi or neo-Fascist organizations or were imbued with their ideology. But in many instances the culprits were not apprehended.

The age structure differed rather considerably from country to country. The German Federal authorities attributed the 685 actions which were reported from December 25, 1959, to January 28, 1960, to 234 persons, of whom about 50% were under 20. In other places, for instance, West Berlin, more adults than teenagers were involved.

The World Jewish Congress notes that there were widely differing views on the background and motivations of the perpetrators. Dr. Robinson lists views that it was a well-organized international machine; or local anti-Semitic groups; mass hysteria or chain reaction; a desire to "show off"; the general uncertain world climate, and widespread juvenile delinquency. But he adds that "the more widely held view is that several factors contributed to the widespread action: some instigation, some chain reaction, desire for publicity, and latent hatred and bias."

The World Jewish Congress permanent representative to the United Nations, Dr. Perlzweig, urged the Secretary-General to request UNESCO "to inquire as to how far anti-Semitic and racialist elements in the religious and secular education" of the Western world "and more particularly in the textbooks in use, help create a climate hospitable to religious intolerance and anti-Semitic incitement." Dr. Perlzweig noted that the "overwhelming majority of the incidents took place in countries of the Western world which in a large measure share in common religious and cultural traditions."
